Dear Licensees:

It's time to kick off another football season here in the great State of Alabama. From one end of the state to the other, season tickets are being bought and tailgate parties are being planned. No matter what team you cheer for, we should all work together to promote responsibility when it comes to consumption of alcoholic beverages. As suppliers, brokers, retailers and ABC Board employees, we play an important part in the battle against the abuse of alcohol products. Unified, we share a common objective of eliminating alcohol abuse, underage consumption and drunk driving. A variety of voices increases the chances of the message being heard. If you need information on, or help with improving skills in, legal-age determination and refusing sales, please contact our Responsible Vendor Program. They offer standardized training for the employees in sale and service of alcoholic beverages.

Last fiscal year, the ABC Board through its operations, provided more than $251 million to state and local governments in Alabama. This included nearly $80 million to the state's general fund, more than $59 million to the state Department of Human Resources, $41 million to the Department of Mental Health, $33 million to education, almost $20 million to Alabama cities and counties, more than $16.8 million to the Alabama Law Enforcement Agency and spent almost $1.8 million to purchase vehicles for the Department of Corrections. The ABC Board operating expenses are paid by consumers of alcoholic beverages. The general public is not taxed to cover ABC Board expenses unless they purchase controlled products, although they do benefit from ABC operations through revenue distribution.

I would like to thank all of our customers, vendors and employees for their hard work. We will continue to find ways to enhance service, cut operating costs, increase revenues and reevaluate the operation for effective ways to better serve the citizens of Alabama. The Board and I realize that you are indispensable to our success, and we hope that the combination of our services and products are meeting your needs. As always, customer service remains a top priority. Please feel free to contact my office any time you have questions or need assistance.

Sincerely,

H.M. Gipson

GOLDEN AGED

American Whiskey and Bourbon are still on fire

BY THOMAS HENRY STRENK

Note: This excerpt is printed with permission from the September/October 2017 issue of StateWays—the Beverage Alcohol Merchandising Magazine for Control States.

“ANYONE WHO SAYS HE CAN PREDICT WHAT’S GOING TO HAPPEN IN THE WHISKEY INDUSTRY 20 YEARS FROM NOW IS CRAZY,” says Wesley Henderson, cofounder/chief innovation officer of Angel’s Envy. Being able to guess how long the current boom for American whiskey will last and stocking inventories, he says, is “like throwing a dart at a wall.” But Henderson adds, “I don’t think there is an end in sight right now.”

Indeed, these are boom times for American whiskey makers, a golden age for brown spirits connoisseurs, and an ideal opportunity for new customers to delve into the category. Producers have the enviable, yet mixed, blessing of demand outstripping supply. They are ramping up production, building new rickhouses, and otherwise aiming to satisfy customers—old and new. Helping to further drive growth is a wave of experimentation with mash bills, batches, and barrels.

“We’re seeing growth in this category like we haven’t experienced since the 1970s,” says Mark Bacon, global brand director for Woodford Reserve.

American whiskey—bourbon, Tennessee, and rye—continues to captivate U.S. consumers. “The American whiskey trend has plenty of room for growth as the country trends back toward historic levels of whiskey consumption,” says Distilled Spirits Council (DISCUS) chief economist David Ozgo.

“How long will the boom last?” is the question on the minds of producers who have to plan to meet future demand. That’s a long-term project, given that whiskeys need time in barrel.

“The vodka boom lasted 30 years—that’s a long time to be in love with an odorless, tasteless spirit,” points out Tom Steffanci, president of Deutsch Family Wine & Spirits. “Now there is a desire for flavor among consumers,” he says, an appetite that has fueled the craft beer explosion as well as interest in American whiskey. “The whiskey trend could last as long as the vodka boom did.”

“We continue to see plenty of opportunities for the American whiskey category. Retail bourbon/whiskey shelf sets are continuing to grow, and consumer acceptance is at an all-time high,” says Jon Holecz, vice president of marketing for Western Spirits. “We do not see any signs of this slowing down for a number of years.”

“WHILE SOME FOLKS ARE PREDICTING A SLOWDOWN IN THE CATEGORY’S VELOCITY IN THE COMING YEARS, AMERICAN whiskey is working from such a large base that no one expects the category to stop growing anytime soon,” says Michael Price, category marketing director, Whiskies, Campari America.

“Demand for the whiskey made at Buffalo Trace Distillery continues to exceed our supply,” says Kris Comstock, senior marketing director—premium whiskey.

“The industry is still playing a little bit of catch up with supply,” says Susan Wahl, group product director for Heaven Hill Distillery. “With many of our products, we are talking about planning six, eight, ten years out,” she notes.

Beyond the current crop of connoisseurs, collectors, and whiskey geeks, who are the consumers just now contemplating the category? Where will the whiskeyphiles of tomorrow come from? One answer is millennials and other newbies to the spirits market. “Younger consumers are expressing greater interest in the category—specifically trading up beyond Whiskey & Coke,” says Chris Fredrickson, cofounder of Traverse City Whiskey Co.

“Millennials continue to discover our brands as they are drawn to authentic stories that are meaningful to them,” says Dennis Carr, president of Anchor Distilling Company. “We’re also seeing a big interest in home entertaining and amateur mixology, which further draws new customers to our brands as they look to discover spirits that are fun to work with and interesting to introduce to friends.”

“Part of the growth in whiskey comes from pulling people away from other types of spirits,” reports Wahl. But a bigger piece is drawing people away from beer, she says. Both liquids share common attributes of craft production and a sense of place and heritage, stories that play well with millennials.

“Times are good; we’re seeing unprecedented things happening in the category,” Henderson says. “But we can’t take anything for granted because things change and you always have to bring your A-game.”

"TOGETHER, WE MADE MY FAVORITE BOURBON ON THE PLANET"

MATTHEW MCCONAUGHEY

THE STORY:
In Kentucky, the only thing more important than bourbon is family. Honoring the long branches of their family trees reaching from the Bluegrass State to the Lone Star State, Matthew McConaughey and Wild Turkey Master Distiller Eddie Russell present their rare, small-batch bourbon.

THE BOURBON:
Eight Year-Old Wild Turkey Bourbon is refined with Texas mesquite and oak charcoals to create Longbranch. This unique method deepens the flavor and complexity of the whiskey resulting in an exceptional bourbon.

TASTING NOTES:
With a bright gold color, the aroma is a balanced blend of vanilla and spices. Flavors of caramel, pear, and hints of citrus round out the palate. The subtle, smoky finish is buttery smooth, with notes of gentle pepper and toasted oak.

AMERICAN VODKA ATTRACTS ATTENTION

BY JACK ROBERTIELLO

Note: This excerpt is printed with permission from the September/October 2017 issue of StateWays—the Beverage Alcohol Merchandising Magazine for Control States.

WHEN THE VODKA BOOM EXPLODED at the turn of the century, the race to create the most elegant and refined brand image and package, using elaborate distillation and filtration processes as well as a variety of ingredients, put imported vodkas at the top of the heap. More obscure, unique, and exotic meant better, the thinking went at the time.

With few exceptions, while vodkas from all over the world were getting plenty of attention, American-made brands were mostly afterthoughts in the minds of many consumers and retailers, often in a race-to-the-bottom kind of price war that left little profit. But a number of factors—the burgeoning small American distiller industry; the locavore trend in product provenance, stories, and ingredients; a renewed interest in American-made spirits; as well as an understanding that great value could be had at more reasonable prices—have lately changed the game.

Now American-made vodkas are growing at a rate that surpasses imports. Further, some of the hottest vodka brands are made in the United States.

Pricing is notoriously savage in the vodka category, and with consumers now more educated, their willingness to spend is being tempered by awareness about quality. “As good as imported vodkas are, consumers have learned that they don’t need to spend $30 for a really good vodka,” says Michael Sachs, director marketing for E. & J. New Amsterdam brand. “I think a lot of the American brands, starting maybe 20 years ago, started the trend so that people could recognize that American vodkas can be really great vodkas.”

Retailers can expect that the newer vodkas from small and large American producers will continue, says Richard Black, VP marketing for vodka and cordials for Campari Americas. “We’re obviously seeing a proliferation of American-made vodkas, and a few are emerging that are doing incredible things in terms of market share gains. We see the vodka category ripe for disruption with a lot of micro and craft distillers coming on board.”

“There’s a lot of great vodka out there now, which is awesome because it means people have more choice,” says Nicole Portwood, VP of brand marketing for Tito’s. “Since the recession of 2008, American entrepreneurialism and the stories of makers have become a true movement.”

Joslyn Hidalgo, the spirits manager at Jubilation Wine and Spirits in Albuquerque,

New Mexico, says that sales are important as ways to increase sampling. “With vodka, it’s kind of hard to explain to people the real differences; you can talk about water sources and what it’s made of, but the differences are subtle to a lot of our customers. They need an attractive.”

“The vodka category is extremely competitive right now for domestic and global players,” says Matthew Pechman, vice president marketing at Heaven Hill’s Deep Eddy. “There’s a lot being invested into the category, and it’s becoming more competitive from a pricing standpoint as well. The important point now is creating differentiation for consumers compared to the big players.”

Reid Hafer, senior brand manager in charge of Deep Eddy's stablemate Burnett's agrees. "The biggest challenges are continuing to stand out in the crowded vodka market and being smarter on a packaging and marketing perspective. We have a very loyal consumer base, but it's important to be relevant and create awareness among new users to the category."

Black says even though a lot of growth is coming from the brands with higher prices, some of the imports have been taking aggressive price cuts. "We have to be very conscious of our pricing strategy on a state-by-state basis to make sure the value proposition is there for consumers."

Locally produced brands are poised to take small bites out of the growing market. That competition has made brand reps more aware of retailers' needs in terms of promotional activity. Sachs says, "Larger retailers are going to look for brands with pull off the shelves that consumers are looking for, and they'll be themselves promoting local brands. You see, craft has taken a foothold in local markets, and they don't have any tolerance for brands that don't sell."

Even though older consumers may still think of brands like Skyy as newcomers, the emerging consumer is a blank slate. "Being established gives you a certain amount of opportunity. We are reintroducing the Skyy story to a new generation of consumers," Black adds. With stories being so important in today's domestic vodka market, it seems most brands will be expected to do the same if they want to climb the price and popularity ladders in this crowded market.

TELL THE "STORY" AND PROMOTE COCKTAILS!

Increase your vodka sales by telling your customers the "story" behind each brand of vodka, including where it was made, the ingredients used, and production details. Be sure to highlight American-made, local, and craft brands.

Also take advantage of the continuing interest in cocktails by encouraging your customers to try a variety of vodkas and flavored vodkas in popular mixed drinks.

THE OTHER BROWN SPIRIT

BY THOMAS HENRY STRENK

Note: This excerpt is printed with permission from the November/December 2017 issue of StateWays—the Beverage Alcohol Merchandising Magazine for Control States.

“WE ARE BORED OF WHISKEY; LET’S GET ON TO THE NEXT THING ALREADY—COGNAC AND BRANDY,” says Liz Pearce, group beverage director/partner of Bonhomme Hospitality Group, the Chicago-based operator of restaurant, bar, and nightclub concepts. She speaks for many questing bartenders and curious consumers who are exploring brown spirits beyond whiskey and turning to brandy in a big way. That’s especially true in the cocktail arena.

“Cognac was at the heart of so many classic cocktails, such as the Sazerac, the Old Fashioned, and the Sidecar, but it was replaced by rye and whiskey when it got too expensive or hard to find. Now mixologists are rediscovering why Cognac was the original ingredient, and it is regaining its place on cocktail menus,” explains Alexandra Albu, director of sales and marketing for CIL US Wines & Spirits, distributor of Camus Cognac.

“There is a crossover from the whiskey category,” says Lisa Laird Dunn, executive vice president and world ambassador for Laird & Company. “The customer for brandy is primarily a millennial and also anyone who enjoys brown spirits and is looking to try new products.”

Cognac is reporting record exports, with the United States as its major market. And while American brandy makers E&J, Christian Brothers, Paul Masson, and Korbel account for the lion’s share of the domestic market, craft producers are entering the category. Brandy specialists like Copper & Kings, Osocalis, Clear Creek, Laird, and St. George are driving consumer interest. Significantly, E. & J. Gallo recently bolstered its brandy portfolio with the purchase of California craft producer Germain-Robin.

Interest in brandy today is multifaceted. Much of the action is in the cocktail arena—both classics and new wave variations, thanks to value and mid-range products aiming at mixability. But brandy still reigns as queen of the after-dinner sippers, with plenty of top-shelf Cognacs and Armagnacs offering transportive experiences. Apple and fruit brandies are performing well. Less-well-known grape distillates such as Pisco, Spanish brandy, and Italian grappa are also garnering interest. Plus, just like there are establishments with a single focus on whiskey and tequila, bars are springing up with an obsession for brandies. While restaurants and bars show off brandy's allure with cocktails and flights, retailers cash in with fourth-quarter special releases and value-added packages perfect for holiday gifting and indulgence.

For a long time, brandy toiled under a few misapprehensions. The spirit was relegated to an occasional after-dinner sipper, a special-occasion indulgence, or for holiday gifting. And choices seemed limited to either top-shelf bottles or cheap lower-shelf jugs, with little else in between. That's all changed. Brandy is starring on the cocktail list, there's a bottle to fit every pocketbook and consumption occasion, and consumers are discovering category outliers such as South American Pisco, Italian Grappa, American applejack, and Spanish brandy.

“We are seeing more and more consumers enjoying Cognac year-round, from classic Hennessy V.S.O.P Privilège cocktails like the Sazerac to newer methods like Hennessy X.O over ice,” says Jordan Bushell, head of mixology and brand education for Hennessy. “Cognac's complex and multilayered taste profile and its mixability in a variety of cocktails and mixed drinks have allowed this spirit to transcend seasons and occasions.”

Brandy demonstrates a clear affinity for the fall and winter months, when it is a symbol of holiday cheer. Indeed, most in the fourth quarter of the year. That's also a key period for promotions and limited releases aimed at holiday gift-giving. "Our customers purchase all the gift packs of any products that we get in," says Carmen Wyatt, owner of Good Times Wine Spirits & Brew in Crossville, Tennessee. "Customers enjoy glassware and anything different in the gift packs."

THINK COCKTAILS AND HOLIDAY PACKAGES

Increase your sales of brandy and Cognac by highlighting cocktails and gift packages this fall and winter holiday season. Prominently display a wide range of well-known brands along with category newcomers, limited releases, flavored versions, and especially local and national craft offerings. Also be sure to promote prepackaged gift packs that include glassware or other complementary items with the brandy or Cognac.

Encourage your customers to try these flavor-rich beverages as after-dinner and special occasion sippers as well as in cocktails.

TRENDS DRIVING GIN SALES

BY KYLE SWARTZ

Note: This excerpt is printed with permission from the March/April 2017 issue of StateWays—the Beverage Alcohol Merchandising Magazine for Control States.

GIN IS A SPIRIT THAT PEOPLE HAVE LONG PREDICTED WILL TAKE OFF IN AMERICA. While the wait may continue for the Great Gin Boom, certain aspects of the category have seen positive movement in recent years. Based on facts and figures from the Beverage Information & Insights Group, the sister research company to StateWays, here are some trends driving gin sales.

FLAVORS BEYOND JUNIPER

Gin has a flavor stigma. Some consumers believe that “most gins are very juniper-forward,” says Ari Anderman, Tanqueray Brand Manager. While many plenty of people enjoy juniper, there are those who avoid the category because they think it’s dominated by one pronounced flavor, which, of course, is no longer the case. Thanks to the craft movement, there’s been a rise in gins produced with local, alternative botanicals. Citrus flavors have become trendy.

“Heavy juniper scares people,” explains Mike Howard, president of Southwest Spirits & Wine, makers of Calamity Gin, which contains wildflowers from the Lone Star State, such as Texas Bluebonnets. Calamity Gin features sweet floral tones with citrus notes and a bit of bitterness. And yes, there’s juniper as the backbone. This is still gin, after all.

GIN STEALS FROM VODKA

Gin has the opportunity to lure consumers away from its fellow white spirit, vodka. On one hand, the vast size difference between the categories makes poaching drinkers easier. Some gin producers also believe there’s an advantage in the difference in flavors, especially in the age of craft. Like a lager beer versus an ale, vodka is smoother to gin’s more-pronounced flavors. That could help gin “recruit vodka drinkers by offering a more interesting and dynamic category,” Anderman says.

Gin may also be better tailored toward the mixology movement by filling “niche in the craft spirits boom that vodka fails to do,” says August Sebastiani, president of 3 Badge Beverage Corporation, which produces Uncle Val’s Gin. “There’s a certain depth of character and flavor to gin that the odorless, colorless vodka doesn’t have for mixologists who want to capitalize on that consumer interest.”

Howard sees Calamity Gin’s Texas Dry as “bridging the gap between vodka and gin. It’s got the juniper and citrus, but it’s still cool and easy drinking like vodka. We want to be a safe landing place for vodka drinkers.”

DEFINING THE CREAM LIQUEUR CATEGORY

BY KYLE SWARTZ

Note: This excerpt is printed with permission from the January/February 2018 issue of StateWays—the Beverage Alcohol Merchandising Magazine for Control States.

CREAM LIQUEURS ARE MORE THAN JUST BLENDS THAT CONTAIN IRISH WHISKEY. RISING CONSUMER INTEREST in craft and premium products has extended into the category. New products coming out include high-end tequilas and rums blended with cream—along with other flavor innovations. And the category has benefited greatly from the mixology movement.

Tequila Rose from McCormick Distilling was among the first cream liqueurs on the shelf that did not feature Irish whiskey. A mix of tequila with strawberry liqueur, the brand launched in 1993. Twenty-five years later, it has blossomed into a consistently successful seller worldwide. “It’s always had appeal for women as an easy-drinking way to participate in the tequila category,” explains Mick Harris, McCormick Distilling managing director.

McCormick Distilling also produces KeKe (pronounced key-key) Key Lime Pie Cream Liqueur. Consumers can drink it straight, over ice, or, as McCormick Distilling increasingly advertises, in cocktails.

One common consumer fear with cream liqueurs is spoiling. But Harris believes these concerns are outdated. “The cream liqueur category has been around a long time,” he says. “There’s a lot of technology now that goes into stabilizing these products. Shelf life is not a major issue for us. Obviously you need to store these products at a proper temperature, and stores should rotate product. But distributors have quality control standards that make it not a problem.”

A relatively new brand in the cream liqueur category has rocketed up the sales chart in recent years. RumChata launched in 2009. According to Agave Loco, the company behind the brand, it’s now the second-best-selling cream liqueur in America (after the Baileys juggernaut). The product combines cream liqueur with Caribbean rum and cinnamon, vanilla, sugar, and other spices. The final flavor is similar to a horchata: a Spanish/Latin spiced drink that’s common in summer.

“Consumers are demanding flavor and premiumization in all areas,” says Bob

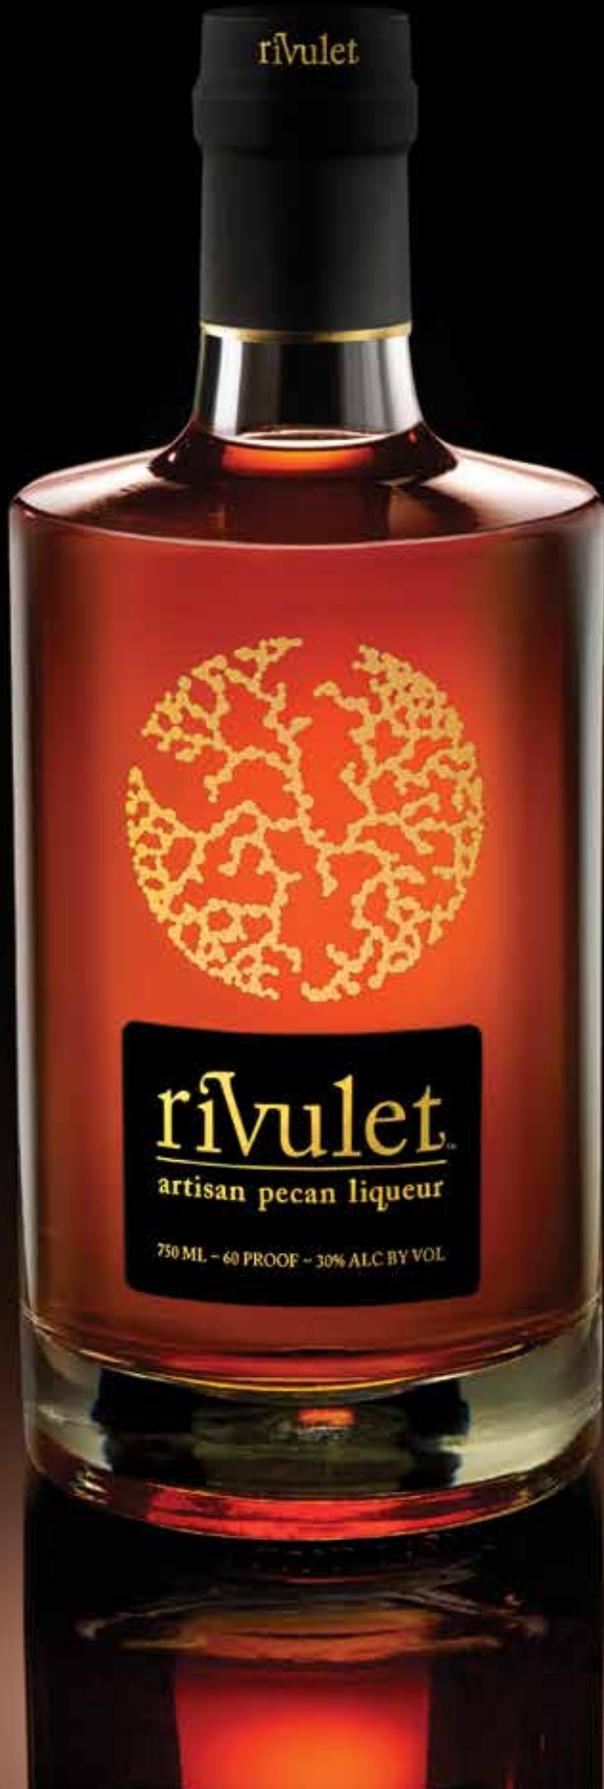

Kopach, Agave Loco director of public relations. “They are continuing to look for great innovative new tastes, versatility, and mixability. RumChata tastes great by itself or mixed with hundreds of other spirits.”

THE PERFECT GIFT!

Help your customers choose a gift that is sure to please and sure to be enjoyed to the very last drop—a bottle of rich-flavored, downright decadent, incredibly luscious cream liqueur! Encourage them to consider the wide variety of available brands and blends, everything from Irish cream and Bourbon cream to spirit-cream blends featuring almond, apple pie, banana pudding, brown sugar, caramel, chocolate, key lime, pumpkin spice, strawberries, vanilla, and almost every other enticing flavor imaginable.

All of them taste delicious as is or poured over ice into a special glass and leisurely sipped, as well as served over ice cream or cake for a memorable dessert. They are also perfect for making shooters, adding special flavor to coffee, and mixing favorite cocktails.
